General held hostage

15-man gov't peace panel detained by MNLF in Jolo

By Julie S. Alpaga
Inquirer Mindanao

ZAMBOANGA CITY—THEIR hosts called them "brothers," put them up in a special guesthouse, served them all the food of their choice, even allowed them use of their cell phones. But the hosts made one thing clear: They cannot leave.

Detained with about 18 other government people were Friday inside a camp of the Moro National Liberation Front, Brig. Gen. Benjamin Dolofino, a situation comment, said he said his group had tried to leave the MNLF camp but were not allowed to depart.

"We have been prevented to leave the camp," Dolofino, head of the National Capital Region command, told the Inquirer yesterday. "We cannot leave the place."

He also said: "We are being held as a sort of leverage."

Dolofino, whose group included Vice-Minister for Peace and former general Ramon Sison, refused to disclose what he meant by "leverage." (They may be involved today, Dolofino told the Inquirer last night. See story on Page A6.)

Dolofino and his team went to the MNLF's Camp Jolo (Jolo) in Zamboanga City on Friday morning to talk with rebel representatives on problems related to the full implementation of the 1996 peace agreement between the government and the Moro group.

On Friday afternoon, they were stopped from leaving the camp.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Dolofino and an MNLF official confirmed to the Inquirer that Dolofino's group had been taken hostage.

CAPTAIN AND CAPTIVE: In a breakthrough meeting last May, Brig. Gen. Benjamin Dolofino (left) proposed with MNLF leader Hashim Malik in the latter's camp in pines the way for talks between MNLF forces and a high-level mission from the Organization of Islamic Conference, which was to monitor the 1996 peace pact between IFP and the MNLF.

THE ARMED FORCES YESTERDAY held off any military action to rescue a government official, an Army general and about a dozen other people detained in a Moro rebel camp in Jolo, as Moro rebels kept the media in the dark about what was really happening with them.

"There's no need for military action. We are monitoring the progress of the negotiations. The negotiations are ongoing," said AFP public information chief Lt. Col. Bernardino Barrios.

He said no troops had been deployed around Zamboanga town in Jolo, where a government peace mission headed by Brig. Gen. Benjamin Dolofino had been detained since Friday inside a Moro rebel camp.

"We will just monitor the situation,"

VODKA-POWERED KICKOFF

Father of 'baby' Catholic Church in Mongolia is a Filipino bishop

By Christian K. Eguerra

ONE SUMMER, 13 YEARS AGO, BISHOP Monsignor Padilla was drinking vodka at 3 in the afternoon in a hotel restaurant in Ulan Bator, the capital of Mongolia.

Padilla, who was then a missionary priest in his early 40s, had an important mission—to establish the Catholic Church in the land of Genghis Khan, a longtime communist territory.

So then he was, downing glasses of wine, whiskey and finally vodka with a top government official who held the key to the formal entry of the Catholic faith in Mongolia.

Padilla received the much-sought approval to help formally register the Catholic Church as a nongovernmental organization. The application for the Catholic Church Mission had earlier been rejected.

Misled of the Mongolian culture and bureaucracy, he had invited the official for drinks to explain the purpose of the Church.

After two hours, both were more drunk, but before they parted ways, the Mongolian official agreed to meet with the Filipino priest the following day.

The next day, Padilla was given the go-ahead, paving the way for the period of Catholicism in the Central Asian country.

Since then, Padilla has been acknowledged as the father of the Mongolian Catholic Church, considered the "baby church" of the Christian world with 345 followers.

Preeminently Buddhist Mongolia was so important to the Catholic world that the late Pope John Paul II planned a visit in time for Padilla's consecration as bishop in 2003, but travel complications kept his Holiness from the journey which would have been the first for a pope.

At present, there is a thriving church structure composed of an episcopal conference and three parishes.

The relative success of the church in Mongolia, largely through the efforts of Padilla and his fellow missionaries, is greatly known outside the Catholic world.

Padilla and company were able to accomplish a lot by adapting to the country's culture while keeping their faith strong.

"I really thought I would become an alcoholic because of the culture in Mongolia," recalled the 57-year-old bishop in June.

Padilla came to Ulan Bator with two other priests from the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Blast from past: Killing of Gens. Batalla, Bautista

By Lawrence de Guzman
Inquirer Research

THERE IS AT LEAST ONE INSTANCE OF reckless military officials being taken hostage—and killed—in Mindanao.

On Jan. 5, 1989, Brig. Gen. Eduardo Batalla, then commander of the Philippine Constabulary in Western Mindanao, and his staff of staff Col. Ramon Alameda, along with five other people, were taken hostage by disarmed policemen and soldiers in Batalla's own office at the Paoay 8 headquarters in Cagayan de Oro, Zamboanga City.

The hostages were held by rogue cop Rinal Alib, who, along with the group numbering about seven, had been ordered to assist in Batalla's office in connection with the killing of seven people in 1984.

During the meeting, Alib was told that he and his men would be de-

Lawyers resigned to Erap's fate

By Norman Bordaberry

IS THE FINAL VERDICT YET TO BE reached on the fate of the country's most controversial politician? The Supreme Court decision in 2005 that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo could not be impeached is the final verdict on the fate of the country's most controversial politician.

However, it also appears to have cemented Erap's fate. Responding to the presidential commission on the Arroyo case through a series of releases, Saguing said the Special Edition was wrong. Erap's release was not the Supreme Court's final verdict. It was the Supreme Court's final verdict on the Arroyo case, according to Saguing, the Special Edition decision especially created to tip the balance. Erap's release was merely a response to the allegedly "unconscionable" decision of the Supreme Court in 2005 when the high court decided that the then President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo could not be impeached in Erap's case, according to Saguing.

The president (author) of the decision was the then Associate Justice, now Chief Justice, Reynato Singson.

"No majority vote of the risk of a wrong verdict... concerning a higher or lower verdict... after it has been, admitted by every... after the fact, according to the decision in 2005," Saguing said.

If Erap's release was not the final verdict, Erap would be allowed to remain in custody until the final verdict is reached.

"We can say that it is a final verdict, after all the evidence is in, to say the Supreme Court was in its final verdict," he added.

Saguing claimed that the Erap's decision was not the final verdict. It was the Supreme Court's final verdict on the Arroyo case, according to Saguing, the Special Edition decision especially created to tip the balance. Erap's release was merely a response to the allegedly "unconscionable" decision of the Supreme Court in 2005 when the high court decided that the then President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo could not be impeached in Erap's case, according to Saguing.

"The phrasing also implies that the decision was not the final verdict," Saguing said.

Traditional newspaper reports and editorial commentary on Erap's release would indicate that the final verdict was reached.

He claimed that the decision had also decided the outcome of Erap's case. At the time, Saguing said that it was not the final verdict on Erap's case. It was the Supreme Court's final verdict on the Arroyo case, according to Saguing.

"This is a final verdict on Erap's case, after all the evidence is in, to say the Supreme Court was in its final verdict," he added.

TAKING ROOTS IN EDUCATIONAL CITY
St. Theresa's College in Quezon City was established after the war, when the USMCs were the ones to start a new campus, larger still, in San Mateo which was then being run.

Occupying five blocks in Sta. Mesa Heights in Quezon City, St. Theresa's College, Quezon City, was officially opened only in June 1947. An added attraction was the beauty of its campus, with its green grass, tall trees and abundant flowering plants. It remains one of the most beautiful campuses in Metro Manila.

In the 1970s, St. Theresa's College in Manila closed down to the main church to prepare a different path to their theological mission. The USMCs all over the world decided to evaluate the changing times and find ways to make the Gospel and the spirit of the foundation relevant to the needs of humanity. Not long after, St. Theresa's College in Quezon City gradually phased out its college department, leaving its elementary and high school departments still operating as parishes represent their work for their children to have the Theresian brand of education.

Consistent with the vision of the Theresian schools came changes in the education sector. Millions of excellence in all male education, like Ateneo de Manila and De La Salle University, turned out. Katarungun colleges, for example, on the other hand, opened their doors to male students. St. Theresa's in Quezon City, while maintaining its high standards of excellence, took on a low profile. Still, the products of its elementary and high school departments performed well in the institutions where they pursued their college education.

St. Theresa's in QC and its sister continue to provide the quality of education consistent with the institution's standards. Recently, there have been efforts to revive the original St. Theresa's Mission.

ACADEMIC PROFICIENCY AND SOCIAL COMMITMENT
The Theresians of the present generation continue to live their light share code that the school has kept true to its commitment to provide basic education which stresses both academic proficiency and a social commitment.

Theresian students learn to exercise leadership in service strongly focused on helping the poor and fighting for justice.

According to the student handbook that every Theresian carries and keeps in her heart and mind, "an authentic Theresian emerges from inner strength of character, based by determination, inner freedom and honesty as the response to the challenge of a fuller life offered in faith as a meaning Christian human and behavior."

The Theresian, furthermore, "is a socially-oriented person, a lady of character, growing into a virtuous woman of courage, vibrant in her faith, as St. Theresa of Avila had embodied."

She is, "a person of dignity, character, equanimity, social justice, able to transcend the poverty and in a situation, putting justice and social responsibility as upmost values."

The Theresian does not just excel in academics. She is also a member of the community and an art training would demand of her, "in moving to those in need, in solidarity with the underprivileged."

Finally, loyalty lies in the heart of the Theresian. As every girl or woman who has worn the blue and white uniform pledged to herself, her fellow alumnae and her alma mater, "since a Theresian, wherever a Theresian, in thought, word, deed."

That Theresian mission & vision

Since 1972, the USMC's Theresian Educational Foundation, Inc. (TEFI) has led fundraising efforts to support thousands of high school students through a 50-percent subsidy of their tuition fees.

The TEFI's initiative is the product of active, socially-sensitive Theresian living at heart.

TEFI fundraising efforts continue to this day. Today, the TEFI Educational Fund supports 300 students, or close to 18 percent of the school's population.

TEFI spends about P5.7 million annually to fulfill its part of the commitment. It is because of this annual pledge that the endowment fund has been gradually built up.

But the TEFI is now seeking up its efforts to increase the endowment fund to P10 million. To date, the fund stands at P29 million.

For those who wish to continue to help TEFI fulfill its mission and uphold the overarching mission of the Mother Foundress Ma. Louise De Messier and her other requests about the fund, you may get in touch with Fr. Helen Rivera at 744-5411 or Sr. Jocelyn Pineda at 744-5171.

Action sought after warming report

PARIS—A HARD-HITTING REPORT FRIDAY BY A UN panel of experts on global warming drew a call for concerted global action, with UN chief Ban Ki-moon urging a much more rapid and determined response.

In the United States, the world's biggest polluter, foreign Secretary James Blaine said the report confirmed what President George W. Bush had said over "the nature of climate change, and it calls for the need for continued UN leadership in addressing global climate issues."

But not the report highlights the scientific consensus regarding the upcoming and dangerous rise of sea-level-induced climate change.

"The global response therefore needs to move much more rapidly, in fact, and with more determination," the UN secretary-general said.

The International Panel on Climate Change (IPCC)—the UN's top scientific authority on global warming—held its fifth meeting last at a conference in Paris.

The IPCC's report, in fact, to experts, said that the world must take action to reduce the warming, droughts and hurricanes, and other damage to climate.

systems for a thousand years to come.

South African Environment Minister Marthinus van Schikhevel said Bush to know the "growing prevalence of extreme weather events in the United States" and to join the global effort to curb global warming.

Indonesia said the UN government under Bush is taking action to curb the growth of greenhouse gas emissions and reducing the development and deployment of clean energy technologies in the United States and elsewhere.

The Indonesian government, one of only two developed countries to vote to sign the Kyoto Protocol, said the US, said Indonesia's support was "nothing less than a commitment to the world."

Environment Minister Marthinus van Schikhevel said he had long accepted that the world must prepare for better and other climate in the future.

"The science in this report is unambiguous and it is clear," he said.

The Australian government's response to climate change has been fast and decisive. "The last 10 years have seen the world's growth in new greenhouse gas emissions to meet our international target and maintain a high level of economic growth."

"But this is a global challenge and for the world to act on climate, we need to see the world's growth in new greenhouse gas emissions to meet our international target and maintain a high level of economic growth."

The most scheduled UN climate change conference, due to be held in the Indonesian city of Bali, is in December next.

Before that, a European Union summit next month, and international groups WFP in Indonesia and French of the North agreed that the UN to take a leading role in increasing its efforts to curb global warming.

FOOD GROUP TURNS 20

Putting its best foot (and food) forward

HIGH INNOVATION: COOL, SUFFICIENTLY LACK OF BUILDING SUPPORT.

Real manifestation has been encouraging these leaders. And with the country's entry into the World Trade Organization some twenty years ago, there are not just foods but challenges for consumers.

The group is the country's largest umbrella organization of local food producers and processors, with over 200 members.

Founded in 1987, when the country was creating a favorable business climate, Philkops has been trying to make all players involved in the food sector in some Philippine products could claim.

As part of its 20th founding year, Philkops is staging the 20th Philippine Food Expo on February 1-4, 2007 in the Maguibo Hall of the Old Manila Museum City.

"The Philippine Food Expo is the ultimate showcase of the love of Filipino food products from all over the country," says the group's president, who says the expo is a great opportunity for the food industry to meet the local and international market and promote the local food products.

He is also president of the International Food Expo, which organizes food shows in Japan and Europe. Philippine Affairs with guests under the Golden Chaperone.

He said the Expo will also feature 100 local food products and services, including the latest challenges in the industry.

While the industry is not exactly in good health, the lack of enough capital and infrastructure, however, there have been some good results.

In 20 years of existence, among the major success the group has achieved is the lack of financing for small-scale, with the setting up of the Philippine Export Import Credit Agency (PEICA) to help small and medium enterprises (SMEs) access credit from banks.

"The Philkops is an affiliate of Philkops, which serves as a clearing house for them to access government loans. In a small, with the help of the association, many SMEs were able to receive and promote the importance of market because the market is the right to be in.

He pointed out that Philkops continues to be a "big brother" of SMEs by providing opportunities for growth, expansion and networking.

Philkops is also actively seeking representation with concerned government agencies in addressing the other concerns affecting the whole food sector.

He said that it is possible when the food business is very profitable, the government is playing a very active role, not only providing financial support, but by creating a conducive business atmosphere.

On the subject of cheap imported goods, he said that local manufacturers should find other markets where Filipino products can stand out as a niche, that is, quality and value.

Local food producers are local products, local, there is a need to implement a long-term strategy to make progress for the agriculture sector.

The only all-Filipino consumer trade fair, the Expo promotes a well-planned approach in marketing its products. There will be consumer education, to include safety, nutrition, hygiene, packaging and labeling, among others.

It also serves as a link to a wide range of consumers from both the local and international markets.

"If all players in the food sector can get their strategies, long-term ideas on how to run their business and how to build their brand, the Expo will be a great success," he said.

The Expo is a joint undertaking with the Department of Agriculture, Science and Technology, Trade and Industry (DTI), Department of Health, Department of Environment and Natural Resources, and the Philippine Export-Import Conference, Inc.

EXPO PARTICIPANTS include local and processed foods, snack foods, confectioneries, baked goods, soups and condiments, beverages, fresh food, equipment and packaging, and food service.

Many London clubs also sport sections patronized by United Arab Emirates, Malaysia and Kuwait. It will critical to figure how on the grounds that they persist in for sporting organizations, but at least 70 players could play their marketing business of its own.

But the Department of Tourism prefers to keep a long chord of the competition. The DOT London Office recently launched Travel Philippines, which earlier is a campaign Philippines can count on by the UK to promote and sell the Philippines to British tourists.

"The Polish communities in the UK have become very influential, especially in the medical services," said Tadeusz Bielecki secretary of the Polish Embassy, who recently went to London during the World Food Market 2000 in London to launch the program coordinated by Tadeusz Bielecki secretary of the Polish Embassy in London.

Tapping the Philippines in the UK to promote the Philippines as a tourism prospect means tapping the culture, still known as exotic, and the Filipinos that have attracted tourists. Filipinos in the UK are mainly in the health and services sector, and they are known for their ability to provide excellent customer service.

There is a growing respect for U.S. jobs in the UK for their industry, "U.S. jobs, hard work and dependability," said JOT London Office head, Jennings Davis E. The Philippines has increasingly become known in the UK as a drug transit destination because of its many state-owned or semi-official opium refineries, its proximity to one of the world's largest heroin markets, and the hospitality of the Filipinos.

A British-based TV drug programme, in fact, proclaimed the Philippines as the best drug destination in the world not only because of its inexpensive but also because of the wealth and social mobility of the Filipinos.

In a survey, 61 percent of UK visitors said they chose the Philippines because of its cheap, attractive beaches.<sup>7</sup>

The Philippines is known in the UK as a bargain hunt. "The Brits' favourite with Quindini, would you believe?" said BOP officer Umar Ruus, ironic, referring to the bargains in the fast-fashion shopping centres. The facilities, by any measure, are incredible considering Britain has by shopping as proven by classic London shopping centres known all across the world, such as Harrods.

"I should be somewhat open on kindergarten how to spread the good word," said Chiz Mwingi of the DPO Law Office. Taxation partners, insurance partners, travel agencies, hotels, resorts and others... may coordinate with the London DPO office to facilitate and/or to prepare for African and other people from the UK.

Philippine can get involved in the new program by registering as "volunteer". They may get in touch with the London office at www.philippines.co.uk/tour.

The odds that Asia-Pacific countries will be successful in Europe could be gauged at the World Tourism Market 2000 in London. The huge exhibits put up by each touring power house as they did last year showed that the European tourism industry also competes with that would be a slice of its own tourism market.

With the rising strength there, the dollar and the European Union impacting the link of Spain to growth and economic recovery, the European Union seems to be on track of achieving its desired single European market and a stronger European foundation. The UK, of course, continues to see the pound as its currency, but since last that, it's moved to Europe's borders or the ocean.

Detailed work by the tourism promoters of its neighbouring Dominican state confirms, the Philippines went the tried-and-tested route of small but beautiful and indigenous. ## McDonald's' secret ingredient

WITH MOMS growing more conscious about the quality of the food they feed their kids, McDonald's focuses on food safety by continuously serving meals made with quality ingredients—delicious, kid-friendly, and mommy-approved!

McDonald's Philosophy problem
Kenneth Tang says, "Quality, service, cleanliness and value, or QSC&V are the four key words that have shaped the way McDonald's cooks its food, runs its store and organizes, and serves its customers. Its focus on these four principles has made McDonald's one of the most recognized and beloved brands in the world. QSC&V is at the heart of everything every McDonald's store does each month, around America and around the globe."

"We never leave quality to chance," says McDonald's Philippines President Kenneth Yang.

For instance, in preparing the long-time house for the Chamberlains, McDonald's follows a series of steps carefully researched in his old kitchen books and abroad. Assembling a Chamberlainer is the fastest time possible without precision and proper timing. It occurred once.

"This is when DICKY really matters. It helps us bring order to what we do and consistency to all our products. When it comes to quality, we at McDonald's never have anything to shame," he says.

A promise
Millonard's comes by The Quality Inn logo, a commitment to serve quality meals to all its customers in all its stores.

to 250,000 in the Philippines alone. The Quality Promise is broad. Guided by ISO-9000, they aim more than 30,000 lbs. McDonald's uses in 129 countries in using only fresh, wholesome ingredients, in supporting agricultural and economic growth in communities where McDonald's is present, in partnering with leading industry suppliers and process brands, in meeting or exceeding food safety standards and regulatory requirements, in full-throated use of packaging that promotes food quality and maintains safety, and in monitoring, measuring and inspecting food quality.

MEINBAUER'S president Kenneth Torg says, "We never learn quality is cheap."

QOCAN starts from the time the food is first handled and prepared. At McWaters, new members have to wash their hands every hour and sanitize every 2 minutes to ensure that food handling is at its most hygienic. They must wear different gloves during different stages of food production. Separate spatulas for preparing raw and cooked eggs are used to prevent contamination.

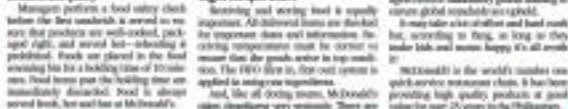

McDonald's eggs are carefully inspected, washed, sanitized, oil-coated and kept refrigerated. They are only washed once. Shortly before cooking to minimize their exposure, sanitized and again.

In order to world-beat French Fils and Fils brooms, McDonald's now grows reed grasses. The Fils are quick to grow in warm fresh water and to grow in warm water. French Fils are not just for the young. They can also be used without any loss of value.

Wounds usually close quite well but may become infected if not kept clean. Wounds should be kept clean and dry until they are completely healed.

100 percent pure
Prepared and packaged at McDonald's approved meat plants, 100 percent pure beef with no additives and preservatives. The beef patties are grilled without fat and oil, with only salt and pepper for the taste.

Chicken patties are made from boneless breast and thigh meat and served with specially seasoned sauce. Chicken 16

To cleaning, it works like flannel in the snow. Many are pleased to select food preparation time; some for hands just clean up. Gaps maintain every test and dry brush, and a spray bottle with ammonia for cleaning to keep your kitchen clean.

Aside from local exposure, each life (usually) receives instructional materials from the global headquarters, in the United States to ensure that operational procedures and quality standards are aligned worldwide. Also, extensive non-work activities, including global training

It may take a little effort and hard work, according to Berg, as long as they make kids and moms happy it's all worth it.

WICKS® is the world's number one quick-service restaurant chain. It has been providing high quality products at good value for over 25 years in the Philippines.

What's behind every McDonald's meal?

Find out as McDonald's opens its kitchen doors to all

McDONALD'S, through its Open Door Program that aims to share its operations and transparency, is inviting visitors to come to get an A behind the scenes.

HOW DOES YOUR CHILD'S INVENTIVE COOKING MEET COME OUT ON-TO-TOY and craps? What games are used in making the favorite McDonald's french fries? How long does it take to cook a juicy McDonald's cheeseburger on? What activities do you get from a McDonald's salad?

To fulfill its brand's promise of food safety and quality, McDonald's holds itself accountable to the highest standards of food safety and quality. McDonald's is committed to transparency and is proud to share its food safety and quality standards with the public through its Food Safety and Quality Program.

First investments in McDonald's China and Australia, the Open Doors Program underscored the brand's focus on food-quality safety, and cleanliness. For McDonald's, it is a way of communicating to all its customers, especially moms, that each McDonald's meal is thoughtfully made, under the best and most caring conditions. This means they are bringing their family to a safe haven that takes their well-being to heart.

Key words Quality service, deadlines and value, or QSC&V are the four key words that have guided the way McDonald's prepares its food. QSC&V brings consistency to all McDonald's products. This consistency has made McDonald's one of the most loved and most trusted brands in the world.

Twinkl, 25, McDonald's will literally open its doors to the public and conduct a tour of its world class kitchens to witness entire operations. It will demonstrate how each McDonald's branch takes food preparation, from the well being
